

NEWS

Studio Alexandria LA
Blush.com
Subscribers 400,000
September 18, 2009

Celebrity Parties: From Greystone Mansion to Sunset Towers, We Hit all the Hot Celebrity Parties

Parties Parties Parties. Life's so much more fun if you sprinkle parties into the main dish. This week my crew and I had a slew of events to hit. We started at a Beefeater Gin party at the Greystone Mansion in Beverly Hills (check out all the movies filmed there!). The mansion, set up in the hills, is something out of a fairy tale – lavish gardens, stunning view of the city and a romantic old house. The party celebrated the new Beefeater 24: the bottle is sexy (and people judge a liquor by the bottle even more often than a book by its cover); the taste is crisp and refreshing with infusions of grapefruit and tea. The British-themed food included grilled cheese sandwiches, Haddock croquettes with tartar sauce, crispy shrimp with aioli and branded cupcakes for desert. Yum yum yum.

Photo courtesy of Stefano Paltera

Source: Flickr user
John Griffiths

Stopped for gas: Harrison Ford's in the car next to me.

Next event: the opening party for Studio Alexandria in Brentwood, where guests had nibbles including cupcakes and lemon bars. The studio is devoted to sugaring. (I'll cover

Sugaring

this ancient method of hair removal more thoroughly on Blush.com and will tell you all about the bikini sugar I'm getting next week.) I had my arms sugared at the event — now, my mother always told me to leave your arm hair alone, so I always have, but I have to say my arms are as soft as a baby's bum. While I could've stayed there all night chatting with the owner, Lina Kennedy, there was one more stop to make.